Tony Shiret joins Whitman Howard to cover Retail

Whitman Howard, the fast growing UK Institutional stockbroker, is pleased to announce the appointment of Tony Shiret as its Retail Analyst.

Richard Morecombe, CEO Whitman Howard, commented;

"I am very pleased to inform everyone that Tony Shiret, a highly rated retail analyst will join the firm in September as the next step in his successful career. He will bring a wealth of experience in the sector, along with a number of very strong relationships. His arrival further highlights our desire and capability to attract further first class talent to Whitman Howard in our pursuit to become one of London's premier independent Institutional Stockbroking firms."

Tony spent time at J Sainsbury before moving to the City. He became an analyst in 1987, joining Barclays de Zoete Wedd in 1993. He remained with the bank after BZW's UK and European corporate advisory and equities businesses were acquired by Credit Suisse in 1997. He has most recently worked at RBS and Espirito Santo.

Tony said "I am looking forward to joining Whitman Howard which has an attractive business model and experienced and motivated colleagues led by Richard Morecombe. I will continue to try to add value for clients as my primary aim and hope this will enhance the firm's appeal in the market."
